Petunia opened the special delivery letter a messenger had just left and gasped in surprise.

"A treasure map of Crystal Lake, with my name on it! I wonder who sent it."

She could find no clue.

"I'll ask Porky to help me search," she decided, rushing to the telephone. "No," she hesitated. "I know Porky! He'd never help me if I told him about this map and how I got it. I'll have to think of another way to get him out there."

Petunia smiled as an idea occurred to her, and she dialed Porky's number.

"Let's go on a picnic, Porky," Petunia cooed into the telephone. "I'll pack a lunch, and we'll make a real party of it."

"Sounds great," Porky readily agreed.

At the same time that the messenger delivered the letter to Petunia's house, a camera crew from the Trick and Treat Television Show was busy hiding the camera at Crystal Lake.

"If Miss Petunia Pig does come looking for our 'treasure,' we will have a great show," the director said. "Now, all we can do is wait."

They didn't have to wait long. An hour later, Petunia and Porky were tramping through the woods near Crystal Lake.

Petunia ran ahead of Porky, peering to the right and the left.

"Golly, Petunia," Porky complained. "You've already passed a dozen good eating places. What are you looking for?"

"This dead oak tree!" Petunia cried out. "It's the first clue to the treasure."

"What treasure?" Porky demanded. "You said we were going on a picnic, not a treasure hunt."

"I promise we'll eat in a minute, but someone sent me a treasure map," Petunia explained. "I just had to see if I could find my treasure. Please help me," she begged, handing the map to Porky.

"Of all the silly things," Porky muttered, looking at the map. "Well, come on. The sooner we get this over with, the sooner we can eat."

"Twelve yards north of the dead oak; nine feet west..." Porky counted off the paces as he read.

Petunia followed eagerly behind him.

"There it is! My treasure chest," Petunia squealed, rushing to open the lid. "Why, it's empty," she cried in dismay.

"You should have guessed that the whole thing was a joke, but you fell for it," Porky laughed. "But cheer up. We can have our picnic party now."

They turned and found themselves staring into the eyes of a big television camera.

"Is this a trick?" Porky glared at Petunia. But Petunia was surprised, too.

"Not a trick, but the Trick and Treat Television Show," the director said, rushing out of his hiding place. "You have heard of our show, haven't you?"

"Yes," they nodded, "but..."

"Then you know how we plan some harmless trick and choose someone to play our game. If they respond successfully, as you have done, we return them to our studio for the treat. If you come with us, there really is a treasure waiting for you, and a party in your honor. What do you say?" he asked.

"A party? That means food," Porky cheered. "I say, let's go!"

"See, Porky," Petunia smiled, "I'm true to my word. I said we'd have a real party, and we will."

The sport a boy grows up with... Shooting a Daisy®

☞ In hockey, 'pulling the trigger' is that split second when a player rifles the puck quickly and accurately into the net. Like shooting a Daisy B-B gun, it requires practice and concentration.

Practice helps you gain confidence and develop your skills. And when you hit the bullseye, it gives you a great deal of personal satisfaction. I know, because I've been scoring bullseyes with hockey pucks and Daisy B-B guns for 25 years.

Now my sons Bobby, Blake, Brett and I shoot together. They're learning what a great friend a gun can be, and developing a sense of responsibility that will be useful in all walks of life. ☞☞
